Medical tourism, is it safe?

The media spotlight has recently focused on the safety surrounding medical tourism, highlighting the need for the public to be self-educated and informed before placing their health in the hands of a surgeon and hospital.

Selecting only highly qualified surgeons and state-of-the-art hospitals with guaranteed satisfaction and follow-up care, is why Restored Beauty Getaways, established in 2003, is a world leader as a medical tourism facilitator.

All surgeries, wherever performed, carry risks. Restored Beauty Getaways' New Zealand Director, Jo Hueston says, "The key is having highly skilled surgeons and medical teams combined with the best hospital facilities and back-up to deal with any possible complications."

Jo has experienced this first hand as she has recently returned from Phuket where she had Abdominoplasty (tummy tuck) surgery. An unexpected complication after surgery meant that Jo required highly specialised care and facilities. "I can't say enough about the skill of the surgeons and amazing care and attention I received from the hospital teams."

I love seeing the fantastic results and huge boost of confidence that my clients return home with!

Jo delights in assisting her many clients with their life-changing procedures, "It's a privilege being involved in such an eventful time in their lives, I love seeing the fantastic results and huge boost of confidence that my clients return home with!"

"Everyone has their own reasons for wanting to change something about their body. For me, 'growing old gracefully' is going to be easy when I can minimise the sags and lines, restore my teeth, revitalize my hips and knees, and even correct my aging eyesight." ◊
